

Environmental Waste Services Ltd

EWS Health & Safety Policy

As the Founder, Owner & Director of Environmental Waste Services Ltd I take the upmost responsibility for Health & Safety at work. The practices we stand for in relation to the environment and safety are paramount to breeding good behaviours and process at EWS.

I take my fiduciary duties passionately and as company head I've ensure that all middle management and staff understand they key responsibilities when it comes to controls and reporting on matters that could adversely affect the Environment and Health & Safety in the workplace.

We have emplaced as three point structure that centres around:

Identifying / Reporting /Action

Identifying:

All staff at EWS (both Operations and Administration) are trained in how to identify potential issues in relation to Health and Safety. All members of staff have a legal duty to co-operate with EWS and its responsibility for Health & Safety

The company are duty bound by law to undertake risk assessments in the work place and will take all reasonable care and responsibility to control foreseeable hazards both internally and externally to the company. Staff will not be asked to undertake any duties that could place them at risk.

Reporting:

Each department has installed a chain of reporting of which I oversee. Staff are encouraged to report all issues regardless of significance in order to fully understand any potential breach of our Environment / Health & Safety duties.

Action:

Environmental Waste Services Ltd takes full responsibility of our employees and company's operations on Health, Safety & the Environment. We will always strive to keep updated on best industry practices and act upon any changes where practical and financial viable.
